THE COMIC READER (formerly ON THE DRAWING BOARD) No. 11, July 26, '62

HAWKMAN -- No word yet on the success of his second tryout. BRAVE AND BOLD #44 features a wash cover by Joe Kubert illustrating "Men Who Moved the World." The second story, "Earth's Impossible Day," is an off-beat human interest yarn.

FLASH -- The November issue cover-features "The Heaviest Man Alive". This issue also brings back the highly acclaimed Daphne Dean, who made her bow in "Snare of the Headline Huntress."

ADAM STRANGE -- The November MYSTERY IN SPACE brings ALANNA to Earth in the "Metal Conqueror of Rann," Be prepared for a surprise when she gets here.

JUSTICE LEAGUE OF AMERICA -- The November issue high-lights a menace the JLA can't even touch--although, of course, the menace can very well touch the JLA heroes. Title: "Challenge of the Untouchable Aliens".

SPIDERMAN -- This hero will be missing from a few issues of AMAZING, but if his trail run in this mag is a success, then expect him back as the star of -- (title as yet uncertain).

THOR -- In case you are wondering, Stan Lee also plots the adventures of this great new hero, but the scripts are penned by Larry Lieber. Jack Kirby and Dick Ayers team to handle the art.

BLACKCAT -- Don't miss the exciting new adventures of this heroine in a giant quarterly comic by Harvey Publications now on sale. Happily, Lee Elias (who has been handling Green Arrow for several years) is back on the job illustrating the stories of the beautiful judo princess. (By the way, who knows the writer's name?) The Black Cat's origin story first appeared in POCKET COMICS (Aug., 1941). This was a miniature comic measuring 5" X 7½".

COMING IN AUGUST -- FANTASTIC MONSTERS OF THE FILMS, from the house of Ron Haydock. Each issue will feature, among other things, a famous serial in review. Slated for an early issue is Dick Lupoff's study of the Captain Marvel cliff-hanger. Don't miss this magazine on your stands.
